

Various zooarchaeological remains were documented from the neolithic layers of Drakaina Cave, including thousands of animal bones, mostly of domesticated species, a wide range of molluscs, a few remains of fish and crab as well as microfauna remains, belonging mainly to rodents.

For further information about Drakaina's zooarchaeological remains read the related sections.